Dear FCC:

The billion dollar system put into outerspace that allows any and all cellular users access to cellular phones is a product that is funded by our tax dollars. The space it is in is free and we should all be allowed the access without having to pay additional charges. If the company you are using does not wish to charge you more for their services and use of their equipment, why should you interfere with the services they offer just to add additional funds to another account that is already being funded by people such as myself.

Thank you for your prompt attention to this matter. Please provide a written response indicating the status/resolution of this matter.

Very truly yours,

Joanne Simcox
